Articles Collection | Public Service Motivation

Articles Collection Posted on 10/31/2025

The Asia Pacific Journal of Public Administration maintains a special collection of articles on Public Service Motivation that examine various questions regarding public service motivation in the public sector. The article collection has two goals. The first is to advance theoretical and practical perspectives on public service motivation across regions. The second goal is strengthening contributions about non-Western scholarship by leveraging contextual and regional distinctions.

Call for Papers | Special Issue on Accounting for What Matters

Call for Papers Posted on 10/3/2025

Public sector organizations are navigating economic instability, climate crises, inequities, and political pressures—often forced to balance financial sustainability with the equally vital goals of social sustainability and equity. This special issue invites research that rethinks public sector accounting and accountability not only as tools for fiscal management but also as frameworks that foster inclusion, fairness, resilience, and long-term public value.

We welcome conceptual, empirical, and comparative studies addressing how accounting can better embed social sustainability, manage value trade-offs, strengthen organizational resilience, and challenge existing power dynamics. Case studies, longitudinal analyses, and critical perspectives across diverse contexts (healthcare, education, social services, etc.) are encouraged.

Deadline:
June 30, 2026

Study Participation | AI in the classroom environment

Study Participation Posted on 10/3/2025

If you are using AI tools in your classes and/or allow your students to use them, and would like to share your experience, please, contact Prof. Mila Gasco Hernandez at mgasco@albany.edu. She is conducting a research study titled "AI in Public Affairs Education: Future Promise or Present Reality?", which aims at understanding the extent to which public affairs programs are addressing and discussing Artificial Intelligence (AI) in the classroom environment. In particular, this research study addresses two research questions:

- (1) how and under what conditions are AI tools being used in the classroom by both faculty and students? and
- (2) what are the benefits and the challenges of using AI tools in the teaching-learning process?

Policy Brief | Social Equity in a Turbulent Time: Policy Implications

Policy Brief Posted on 9/26/2025

The American University in Cairo's School of Global Affairs and Public Policy (GAPP) is pleased to announce the publication of its latest policy brief, Policy Brief#33, entitled "Social Equity in A Turbulent Time: Policy Implications" by Professor Mary E. Guy of the University of Colorado Denver. This publication is part of GAPP Policy Brief Series, edited by Professor Shahjahan Bhuiyan. Survey | Teaching Democracy in Challenging Times? Take the Public Administration Instructor Survey

Survey Posted on 9/12/2025

Public Administration Education Survey - Endorsed by the Journal of Public Affairs Education

We invite all full- and part-time instructors of public administration and policy studies in the U.S. to complete a brief (15-minute) survey by December 15, 2025. The survey explores how democratic standards are addressed in teaching and accreditation, and whether course content is being censored or self-censored. Responses are confidential and only aggregated results will be shared to inform future workshops. The study has IRB approval and is endorsed by the Journal of Public Affairs Education. Questions? Contact Christopher Koliba at ckoliba@ku.edu.

Deadline:
December 15, 2025

PPMR Special Issue | Call for Papers of Citizen Participation and Co-production

Call for Papers Posted on 9/12/2025

This special issue invites papers that deepen our understanding of citizen participation and co-production in contemporary public administration. We seek submissions that examine motivations and constraints, explore citizen-state dynamics, and evaluate participation and co-production's ability to generate inclusive public value. We especially welcome studies using innovative methods and addressing critical contexts.

PPMR Special Issue | Call for Papers of Understanding Administrative Burden

Call for Papers Posted on 9/12/2025

This special issue invites papers that advance theoretical, methodological, and practical understandings of administrative burden. We seek contributions that challenge conventional views, propose new tools for analysis, or evaluate efforts to redesign processes for greater inclusion and fairness. We especially welcome papers exploring how AI, automation, and digital service delivery influence burdens—and for whom. We also encourage work that centers social equity and incorporates intersectional or justice-oriented approaches.

JBPA | Call for Papers on Null Results

Call for Papers Posted on 9/12/2025

The Journal of Behavioral Public Administration (JBPA) seeks papers for a special issue on null results. Null results are important for scientific progress and for policy making. But null results require nuanced consideration to be informative—null results caused by a small sample size or measurement error may hide true (non-zero and substantively meaningful) effects. JBPA welcomes null results Public Administration papers, especially those utilizing pre-hoc power analysis, pre-registration, experimental manipulation checks, Bayesian t-tests/Bayes factors, TOST procedures or simulated confidence intervals to rule out large effect, and other nuanced and convincing methods. Full research papers will be evaluated on an ongoing basis.

Deadline:
July 31, 2026

Collection on Public Administration in Context: Non-Western Philosophies, Religion, Cultures, & the Global South

Publication Posted on 9/5/2025

The Asia Pacific Journal of Public Administration has published a collection of articles that explores how religious, cultural, and contextual factors influence the theory and practice of public administration across different settings. Moving beyond Western frameworks, it highlights how deeply ingrained societal values—whether from Confucian, Islamic, or other cultural traditions—shape public service motivations, institutional logics, administrative actions, and bureaucratic performance. This collection highlights the importance of historically and culturally embedded norms, particularly in non-Western contexts where religion, tradition, and authority intersect uniquely to shape administrative realities.
